For over 25 years, Alex worked for the National Police. He began his career working in the fight against urban violence, mainly in the Anti-Criminal Brigade (BAC), before joining the prestigious GIPN unit. After many on the field missions and high-pressured experiences, he developed a strong capacity to understand unstable situations, to put strategies in place that would help diffuse stress and to deal with crisis of any kind.

Today he is the Head of a training service at the Police. Transmission of knowledge is primordial to him, so he assists and trains many officers from operational units in crisis management in general, in the phenomena of violence (physical, verbal, or psychological), conflicts and aggressivity. He is convinced that we learn and progress by living through strong and rich learning experiences, so he regularly organises simulated terrorist attacks and mass killings which help participants adopt the most efficient countermeasures.

His pragmatic operational approach helps participants quickly integrate the methods to deal with any kind of deteriorating situation.

In 2021 he joined AND Group where he works for businesses on the themes of crisis management, managing critical situations, as well as team spirit and conflict management.
