After graduating from the Polytechnic School and the Mines de Paris, Simon Martenot began working for Veolia in Social Relations, before joining the SNCF in high-level managerial posts where he constantly had to negotiate.

He is currently sales manager at Keolis, where he takes advantage of his acute sense of complex environment analysis and his strong capacity to understand psychological mechanisms.

With solid experience in the field of social relations and management, Simon Martenot is endowed with very efficient strategic and operational vision when it is necessary to make heavy transitions or changes in the organisation.

As a member of the ADN Group team since 2017, he works with businesses and government organisations in the fields of social negotiation, social risks, and complex negotiation.
